“Vocalist Liz Enthusiasm’s voice will make you feel as though someone had just shot you up with a lethal dose of pixie dust gathered from a chocolate-covered honey cloud.” — Vice

After hacking together a time machine from some old synths, blinky lights, and duct tape, premier U.S. electropop band Freezepop — comprised of Liz Enthusiasm (vocalist), the Duke of Pannekoeken (producer/vocalist/programmer), and Sean Drinkwater (synthesizers/programmer/vocalist) — has emerged three futures later to present you with their brand new album, Future Future Future Perfect. After nearly eight years of self-releasing their CDs, Freezepop is excited to be partnering with Cordless Recordings/Rykodisc for the album’s September 25, 2007 release.

Future Future Future Perfect has been carefully crafted to make you feel pretty awesome. It’s a lovely outgrowth of Freezepop’s sound, pushing the stylistic boundaries of what they have accomplished in their previous two full-length releases, while still maintaining their trademark catchy melodies and infectious energy. Their latest single and lead track, “Less Talk More Rokk,” appears in the massively popular video game Guitar Hero II and has stayed in the iTunes Top 10 Electronic chart since being made available earlier this year.

Unlike most electronic pop albums, Future Future Future Perfect is something you’ll want to listen to very closely. The rhythms will quickly lodge themselves in your head, but the lyrics and melodies will keep you coming back for more. It all makes perfect sense as you traverse through tracks like “Pop Music Is Not a Crime,” “Ninja of Love,” “Brainpower,” and of course, “Do You Like My Wang™?”: Freezepop has perfected the art of serious fun. This has made the band a perfect fit for videogame soundtracks, and they are in the unique position of having built a devoted following worldwide largely through their appearances in several games (including DDR, both installments of the Guitar Hero series, and more to be announced in the next few months).

With a wry sense of humor displayed both on their recordings and in a live setting, Freezepop has enjoyed playing chaotic and energetic shows throughout North America and Europe. Their live show, developed specifically to counter the boring dudes-behind-a-keyboard reputation of many electronic bands, is filled with keytars and other wonderful electronic gadgetry, fan participation, snacks, crowd-surfing stuffed sharks, and future perfect fun. The band will be touring this fall in support of the new album.

Future Future Future Perfect is released September 25, 2007 on Cordless Recordings/Rykodisc.
