KEEP YOUR EARS OPEN FOR THESE ARTISTS IN 2016

Another year, another chance for newcomers to make their marks. Fetty Wap, Charlie Puth and Tori Kelly are a few of the artists who broke out in 2015, but what about the next crop of newbies waiting in the wings? USA TODAY's Patrick Ryan rounds up five up-and-comers to keep on your radar.

ANDRA DAY

AGE: 31

BASED: Los Angeles

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW:

She's a brassy-voiced singer with pin-up style and a throwback sound, pulling from jazz, blues and pop influences on her debut album, Cheers to the Fall, nominated this year for a best R&B album Grammy Award (one of two nods she received, along with best R&B performance for Rise Up). Since catching the attention of Warner Bros. Records with YouTube covers of Eminem (Lose Yourself) and Jessie J (Mamma Knows Best), the San Diego native has opened for Lenny Kravitz on tour and appeared in an Apple commercial with one of her earliest champions, Stevie Wonder, singing his Someday at Christmas.
